

VANDERBILT HOUSE ON FIFTH AVENUE GOES TO CORNELIUS

Passes From Late George W.
With $2,000,000 in Cash and Pictures.

OTHER PROPERTY, TOO.

Cets All This by Terms of the Will of William H. Vanderbilt, His Grandfather.

The original Vanderbilt mansion on Fifth avenue, $1,000,000, a collection of paintings worth $1,000,000 more and property at Fifty-second street and Madison avenue worth hundreds of thousands of dollars has just passed into the hands of Cornelius Vanderbilt by the death of George W. Vanderbilt at Washington on Friday last.

This is in accordance with the terms of the will of William H. Vanderbilt, father of the dead man and grandfather of Cornelius.

The brownstone mansion, which is at No. 60 Fifth avenue, at the corner of Fifty-first street, has been known to New Yorkers for thirty years as "the George W. Vanderbilt house" and cost $1,000,000.

The will of William H. Vanderbilt left the house, the art collection and the stables on Madison avenue to his wife during her life. George W. Vanderbilt made the residuary legate for his life.

It was to pass to his eldest son, or if he died without leaving a son it was to go to the eldest son of his brother, Cornelius Vanderbilt.

William H. Vanderbilt, the eldest son of Cornelius, died of typhoid fever in his junior year at Yale and his brother, Cornelius Vanderbilt, was the next in line.

Cornelius Vanderbilt became estranged from his father, who did not recognize him in his will as the head of the branch of the family, and left the bulk of his fortune to Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt.

The brothers made a private settlement, in which Cornelius was provided for comfortably.

But the father's will could not affect the inheritance of the eldest by birth from his grandfather, and now Cornelius Vanderbilt, who has distinguished himself by his business activity and enthusiastic participation in the duties of the National Guard of this State, as distinct from purely social amusements, comes into the possession of the palatial home.

It is understood that Cornelius Vanderbilt will use the big house when the lease on it held by Henry C. Frick, the steel millionaire, expires next year. It will be a fine setting for such elaborate entertainments as those which Cornelius Vanderbilt and his wife have given in the last ten years.

From the vestibule, the stained glass and mosaic work of which was painted by Fechin of Venice, one passes through bronze doors which came from the palace of Prince of San Donato into a court which reaches the length of the house. The ceiling of this huge court is the roof of the house.

One striking feature of the court is a large mantelpiece of red marble and bronze over an open fireplace. The mantel reaches to the first gallery and is supported by life-size figures.

The drawing-room, the decorations of which were designed by Gallaud of Paris, has woodwork carved by some of the master carvers of Europe. The picture gallery is thirty feet, in three stories high and is the largest room in the house, of which there are no two alike. The collection of paintings that the gallery contains cost more than $1,000,000.

VANDERBILT'S BODY SENT HERE FOR BURIAL.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Funeral services for George W. Vanderbilt were held here to-day and his body was taken to New York, Staten Island, for burial at the old Vanderbilt home. The services were simple and brief, and only close friends and relatives attended.

Honorary pallbearers from Staten Island, C. D. Beattie, Arthur Willett, Clifford Pinchot, Overton Price, Henry White, Herbert Putnam, Charles D. Walcott, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, and Major-General Leonard Wood, Chief of Staff of the Army, were honorary pallbearers.

Jane Rolston, London's "Red Virgin," Leads I. W. W. Mob of Church Raiders

Childless Woman of Fifty Becomes "Mother" of the Army of Unemployed and Glories in Their Acts Against the Constituted Laws—
Calls Tannenbaum,
Their Leader, "a Beautiful Child, and Smart."

Vitriolic of Tongue and Pen, She Resents Her
Portrait in Novel and Shuns Notoriety While Planning Raids—A College Woman, She Knows the Bible—and Slang as Well—Calls Arrests
"Persecution."

Back of the agitation and turmoil of the I. W. W.'s spectacular church raid and its rapidly thinning "army of unemployed" stands a curious and quaint figure—a woman. Unseen, almost secreted from the eyes of the world she wants to revolutionize, apparently disdainful notoriety, yet capable of vitriolic utterance and vigorous act—she is the guiding hand and the genius, a woman with a most sensational purpose in life.

She is Jane Rolston—vividly portrayed as the "Red Virgin" in Jack London's book "The Iron Heel." She is refined and remarkably well educated, a college woman, in fact, because years ago she attended Wellesley—leaving it because of her new and strange views to go West and take up what to her had become the gospel of life. To-day she is a teacher and a writer and belongs to the small circle of what is described as "the brains of the I. W. W." She says she is only secretary of Branch No. 178, formerly with headquarters in East One Hundred and Twelfth street and now at No. 314 West street.

"Blow up Fifth avenue!" she scoffed when an Evening World reporter found her in a little room in the house at No. 159 State street, Brooklyn.

"Why," she blazed, "it wouldn't do any good to blow up Fifth avenue! I tell you everybody is misrepresenting us. There is no fear of the I. W. W. blowing up anything or doing anything violent!"

GENERAL ATTACK ALL ALONG THE LINE.

Therupon Miss Rolston launched into a tirade attack upon the institutions of the day, upon the clergy, upon the police and the judges, upon the press and, above all, what she called the plutocracy. She is a woman between fifty and fifty-five years of age, rather heavily built, with gray hair slightly streaked with the original brown and eyes that flash when she grows excited. She lives in a front room, rather comfortably furnished, and filled to overflowing with books and magazines reflecting her temperament.

She vigorously defended the "march of the hungry" and derided the churches and the clergy. Whereupon she heaped enconiums upon the head of young Frank Tannenbaum, the leader of the "church-raiders."

"Ah, he is a beautiful child!" she exclaimed, "and the smartest of all!"

She called Tannenbaum "the rest of the horde" "my boys." She appeared strangely in the role of mother to the young recruits of the I. W. W. She was asked why she, too, if she was so thoroughly in sympathy with the idea to go out and demand food, did not join the army.

"What good would it have done for me to march? Yet, I would have been arrested—but, paroled, I suppose, because I am a woman. We are not seeking notoriety. My boys all detest such a thing; it is distasteful to all of us, and especially to the boys, because it seems to save so much of the antics of the middle class."

This woman—the original of the fictional character, the "Red Virgin"—exhibited a strangely powerful mind, able instantly to fire answers to arguments against mob tactics and I. W. W. propaganda. That, if they did not explain certainly, did bring down vituperation on the heads of aristocrats, as represented by "things as they are." She quoted Plato and Aristotle and Sir Walter Scott and the Bible.

"You know," she said, "I was brought up in a Puritan church, and I know my Bible pretty well."

"The churches were especially

JANE ROLSTON.

chosen," she had said in speaking of the raid for food, "because they say in the words of their Founder, though they neither follow nor respect his principles. Come unto Me, all ye who are heavy laden and I will give ye rest!"

"Blow up Fifth avenue!" she scoffed when an Evening World reporter found her in a little room in the house at No. 159 State street, Brooklyn.

"Why," she blazed, "it wouldn't do any good to blow up Fifth avenue! I tell you everybody is misrepresenting us. There is no fear of the I. W. W. blowing up anything or doing anything violent!"

Therupon Miss Rolston launched into a tirade attack upon the institutions of the day, upon the clergy, upon the police and the judges, upon the press and, above all, what she called the plutocracy. She is a woman between fifty and fifty-five years of age, rather heavily built, with gray hair slightly streaked with the original brown and eyes that flash when she grows excited. She lives in a front room, rather comfortably furnished, and filled to overflowing with books and magazines reflecting her temperament.

She vigorously defended the "march of the hungry" and derided the churches and the clergy. Whereupon she heaped enconiums upon the head of young Frank Tannenbaum, the leader of the "church-raiders."

"Ah, he is a beautiful child!" she exclaimed, "and the smartest of all!"

She called Tannenbaum "the rest of the horde" "my boys." She appeared strangely in the role of mother to the young recruits of the I. W. W. She was asked why she, too, if she was so thoroughly in sympathy with the idea to go out and demand food, did not join the army.

"What good would it have done for me to march? Yet, I would have been arrested—but, paroled, I suppose, because I am a woman. We are not seeking notoriety. My boys all detest such a thing; it is distasteful to all of us, and especially to the boys, because it seems to save so much of the antics of the middle class."

This woman—the original of the fictional character, the "Red Virgin"—exhibited a strangely powerful mind, able instantly to fire answers to arguments against mob tactics and I. W. W. propaganda. That, if they did not explain certainly, did bring down vituperation on the heads of aristocrats, as represented by "things as they are." She quoted Plato and Aristotle and Sir Walter Scott and the Bible.

"You know," she said, "I was brought up in a Puritan church, and I know my Bible pretty well."

"The churches were especially

chosen," she had said in speaking of the raid for food, "because they say in the words of their Founder, though they neither follow nor respect his principles. Come unto Me, all ye who are heavy laden and I will give ye rest!"

"Blow up Fifth avenue!" she scoffed when an Evening World reporter found her in a little room in the house at No. 159 State street, Brooklyn.

"Why," she blazed, "it wouldn't do any good to blow up Fifth avenue! I tell you everybody is misrepresenting us. There is no fear of the I. W. W. blowing up anything or doing anything violent!"

Therupon Miss Rolston launched into a tirade attack upon the institutions of the day, upon the clergy, upon the police and the judges, upon the press and, above all, what she called the plutocracy. She is a woman between fifty and fifty-five years of age, rather heavily built, with gray hair slightly streaked with the original brown and eyes that flash when she grows excited. She lives in a front room, rather comfortably furnished, and filled to overflowing with books and magazines reflecting her temperament.

She vigorously defended the "march of the hungry" and derided the churches and the clergy. Whereupon she heaped enconiums upon the head of young Frank Tannenbaum, the leader of the "church-raiders."

"Ah, he is a beautiful child!" she exclaimed, "and the smartest of all!"

She called Tannenbaum "the rest of the horde" "my boys." She appeared strangely in the role of mother to the young recruits of the I. W. W. She was asked why she, too, if she was so thoroughly in sympathy with the idea to go out and demand food, did not join the army.

WE WON'T BE FREE, SAY 75 I. W. W.'S OFFERED LIBERTY

They Scorn Chance to Escape Punishment by Plea of Guilty in Court.

103 GLAD TO GET AWAY.

Majority of Church Raiders
Gain Freedom on Suspended Sentence.

One hundred and three of the 191 Tannenbaum church raiders who have been in the city prisons for the last five days were released to-day by Magistrate Campbell, sitting in old Mulberry street Police Headquarters, under suspended sentence.

This action came as the result of a visit by Assistant District Attorney Dickinson to the city prisons yesterday, when he interviewed each of the "army of the unemployed." They agreed to plead not guilty and accept freedom under suspended sentence. The men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

About seventy-five of the "army" elected to make a fight against the courts and the evidence of the police. These cases are being tried individually.

When court convened Assistant District Attorney Dickinson informed Magistrate Campbell that he had spent Saturday and Sunday afternoons interviewing the prisoners. Justice Sheffield, counsel for the I. W. W., accompanied him in his tour of the prisons, but when Mr. Dickinson asked the incarcerated men whether they would plead guilty Sheffield told them not to answer, and finally at was necessary for Mr. Dickinson to order the lawyer from the cell.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Under the circumstances, the men were brought into court in batches of ten, and, after pleading, informed that if they were rearrested for disorderly conduct they would be sent to the workhouse on their plea of guilty.

Sweet Sixteen (No. 3) In 1820

By Eleanor Schorer

Remove Dandruff

Dandruff is not a necessary evil. Modern science has produced from the purest crude oil an elegant and stainless scalp cleanser and hair restorer called CUTEX.

CUTEX removes all the greasy scales, dandruff, itching, and all the conditions that cause the hair to fall out, leaving it soft, shiny, and healthy.

CUTEX will destroy dandruff, stop falling hair, promote its growth, stimulate the roots, prevent itching, and make fine, luxuriant hair. It contains no alcohol, and the hair roots with CUTEX don't dry out with alcohol. It will not change the color of the hair.

In tubes only. Never in bottles. Sold at drug and department stores everywhere.

ARMED DEPUTIES ROUT
"GEN." KELLY'S ARMY

Three Hundred Use Pickhandles
in Fight With I. W. W. Mob
of 600 at Sacramento.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., March 9.—Three hundred deputy sheriffs with pickhandles fought with double that number of Industrial Workers of the World armed with clubs in an attempt to-day to drive "Gen." Kelly's army of unemployed off the Southern Pacific right of way. A score of men were injured before the campers were routed.

When driven from the field the Industrial Workers took up the cry "on to the Capitol" and started for the State House. City and county officials appealed to Gov. Johnson to call out all available State troops to handle the riot.

Read What a World
"AGENTS WANTED"
Advertiser Has to Say:

Wellness Pharmacal Co.,
2415 S. 3d St.,
Brooklyn, Mar. 34, 1914.

Kindly accept my praise of your paper. I inserted two "Agents Wanted" ads. in the Sunday World and had replies from some of the finest houses in all parts of the country. I had to insert another ad. for girls to answer and file papers.

Yours respectfully,
Karl Hagenkötter, Mgr.

If your "Agents Wanted" Ad. is printed in The World, Morning or Sunday, it gets a circulation in New York City alone greater than if published in the Herald, Times, Sun and Tribune COMBINED.

Use World 7-Time Ad. for Economy and Effectiveness

A POSITIVE SENSATION
AN ABSOLUTE INNOVATION
Not Black Slavery—Not Even White Slavery—Not Moving Pictures, BUT
The Red Slave of Niagara

(Guaranteed to Be "Within the Law")
This production took eight months to perfect and build, besides
BRAIN'S CAPITAL ENERGY
$75000 PER WEEK
is the difference between the price demanded and the price offered by Hammerstein for this attraction.

NOTICE—If you are anxious to see The Red Slave in real life, or curious to know how audacious and nerve the author has been in producing this stupendous dramatic spectacle for vaudeville, drop a note or letter to William Hammerstein care of United Booking Office, Palace Theatre Building, and tell him so.

SCARLET FEVER LAYS A TOWN LOW, CLOSING CHURCHES AND SCHOOLS

Whole Families Wiped Out and Others Stricken in Florence, N. J.

TRENTON, N. J., March 9.—An epidemic of scarlet fever has laid low a town of 10,000 people in New Jersey, closing all schools, churches, moving picture shows and other places of public gathering.

Dr. D. C. Bowen, chief inspector of the division of contagious diseases and sanitation of the State Board of Health, left Trenton to-day for Florence to take charge of isolation and quarantine measures. He said the epidemic was of the virulent type and to control it would require the strictest measures.

Pathetic features of the plague have added to the terror of Florence. Alvah Cary lost four children and, worn out by constant watching on the bedside, both Mr. and Mrs. Cary have collapsed. A relief fund has been raised for the family.

At the S. H. Lukens home the disease claimed its third victim, Margaret, seven years old, who contracted the fever at the funeral of a sister, Mrs. Lukens, the mother, was one of the victims.

Dr. A. Clark Hunt, chief of the Bureau of Contagious Diseases of the Board of Health, said to-day:

"There has been a great deal of scarlet fever in New Jersey recently. Since December it has shown marked increase and twenty-one cases are now reported and under observation."

"Most of the cases now occupying us are in Florence Township, the largest town of which are Florence and Rocking. The township is about nine miles from Trenton."

"In order to get an accurate survey of the conditions in Florence we have sent Dr. Bowen, State Sanitary Inspector, to that village and request a report from him this evening."

INSURE.
(From the Boston Transcript.)
"So you're going over on the steamboat. Aren't you afraid you'll be seasick?"
"Not a bit! You see I've swung around on the straps of crowded trolleys every day for years, so I've used to a rough voyage."

Remove Dandruff

Dandruff is not a necessary evil. Modern science has produced from the purest crude oil an elegant and stainless scalp cleanser and hair restorer called CUTEX.

CUTEX removes all the greasy scales, dandruff, itching, and all the conditions that cause the hair to fall out, leaving it soft, shiny, and healthy.

CUTEX will destroy dandruff, stop falling hair, promote its growth, stimulate the roots, prevent itching, and make fine, luxuriant hair. It contains no alcohol, and the hair roots with CUTEX don't dry out with alcohol. It will not change the color of the hair.

In tubes only. Never in bottles. Sold at drug and department stores everywhere.

ARMED DEPUTIES ROUT
"GEN." KELLY'S ARMY

Three Hundred Use Pickhandles
in Fight With I. W. W. Mob
of 600 at Sacramento.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., March 9.—Three hundred deputy sheriffs with pickhandles fought with double that number of Industrial Workers of the World armed with clubs in an attempt to-day to drive "Gen." Kelly's army of unemployed off the Southern Pacific right of way. A score of men were injured before the campers were routed.

When driven from the field the Industrial Workers took up the cry "on to the Capitol" and started for the State House. City and county officials appealed to Gov. Johnson to call out all available State troops to handle the riot.

Read What a World
"AGENTS WANTED"
Advertiser Has to Say:

Wellness Pharmacal Co.,
2415 S. 3d St.,
Brooklyn, Mar. 34, 1914.

Kindly accept my praise of your paper. I inserted two "Agents Wanted" ads. in the Sunday World and had replies from some of the finest houses in all parts of the country. I had to insert another ad. for girls to answer and file papers.

Yours respectfully,
Karl Hagenkötter, Mgr.

If your "Agents Wanted" Ad. is printed in The World, Morning or Sunday, it gets a circulation in New York City alone greater than if published in the Herald, Times, Sun and Tribune COMBINED.

Use World 7-Time Ad. for Economy and Effectiveness

A POSITIVE SENSATION
AN ABSOLUTE INNOVATION
Not Black Slavery—Not Even White Slavery—Not Moving Pictures, BUT
The Red Slave of Niagara

(Guaranteed to Be "Within the Law")
This production took eight months to perfect and build, besides
BRAIN'S CAPITAL ENERGY
$75000 PER WEEK
is the difference between the price demanded and the price offered by Hammerstein for this attraction.

NOTICE—If you are anxious to see The Red Slave in real life, or curious to know how audacious and nerve the author has been in producing this stupendous dramatic spectacle for vaudeville, drop a note or letter to William Hammerstein care of United Booking Office, Palace Theatre Building, and tell him so.

Tortures of Indigestion
Miseries of Constipation
Evils of Impure Blood
Quickly and Safely Removed by
EX-LAX

The Chocolate Laxative
Ex-Lax Saves Pain and Suffering; makes people healthy and is safe for infants and grown-ups.

Ex-Lax is guaranteed to be efficient, gentle, harmless.
A-Sole-Singapore-Pure-Thin-Try-It-To-Day-All-Druggists.